

Regarding telemarketer rules under consideration, can we please have a national no-call list? In my house, we are receiving close to one-quarter of our calls from telemarketers and we have two teenaged daughters, so you can imagine the volume.

I have taught my daughters never to say "Hello" twice and we have signed up for the DMA list in an attempt to stop the solicitations, to no avail.

While you're at it, a no-email list would be nice (since the volume for unsolicited business-related emails is closer to 75%), but I suspect that would be tougher, since so many originate in other countries.

Thanks for any assistance.
